Executive Summary

This year was the twelfth year of the Lawn Care for Cleaner Air (LCCA) program and the third full year for the Grow More Mow Less (GMML) program. Both programs aim to reduce air pollution in Louisville by reducing lawn-related pollutant emissions.

The LCCA program, which has both residential and professional levels, incentivizes cleaner lawn equipment use by Jefferson County residents through rebates and public awareness. Between the LCCA and Lawn Care for Cleaner Air Professional (LCCAP) programs, the Air Pollution Control District (APCD) issued a total of 338 rebates in 2015, worth $17,355. These numbers are down significantly from 2014 and continue a downward trend that started in 2011. In 2010 we issued 1,045 rebates, but every year since has seen a decrease with the largest occurring between 2011 and 2012 where we saw rebate totals drop from 883 to 593 for a difference of 290 rebates. This demonstrates that the drop from 2014 to 2015 is not an anomaly. Yet despite this year's drop in rebate totals, the program still managed to keep 48,771 pounds of harmful carbon monoxide, oxides of nitrogen, volatile organic compounds, and particulate matter out of Louisville's air. Assuming continued use of equipment since purchase, the LCCA program has kept 6,325,893 pounds of criteria pollutants out of Louisville's air over its 12-year history.

GMML is a complementary program that encourages Louisvillians to replace high-maintenance turfgrass with "low mow" or "no mow" landscaping. The program's popularity and visibility has continued to grow over the last year, especially on Facebook, where the page's "likes" have grown to almost 1,900 and the page's posts often reach over 1,000 people. One specific post from September asking people to hold off on mowing due to high ozone levels was shared 30 times and reached 3,696 people. Both of those numbers are records for our page.

I. Introduction

There are over 71,000 mowable acres in Louisville. That’s a lot of grass. Perhaps it’s not completely surprising then that lawn maintenance-related air pollution (that is, pollution caused by lawn mowers, leaf blowers, and string trimmers) accounts for about 20.5 million pounds of air pollution in Louisville every year (7,100,000 pounds without CO<sub>2</sub>). This includes some 720,800 pounds of volatile organic compounds and 34,500 pounds of nitrous oxides, both of which are principal contributors to the formation of ground-level ozone. Worse yet, most of these emissions occur during the warm months of the year, when Louisville often struggles with elevated levels of ozone.

In order to reduce these lawn-related emissions, the Air Pollution Control District (APCD) created the Lawn Care for Cleaner Air program (LCCA) in 2003. LCCA gives rebates to Louisville residents on electric and reel lawn equipment and double rebates to those who recycle their old lawn equipment with Louisville Metro Solid Waste Management Division.

After years of promoting the idea of air-friendly landscaping through the LCCA program, in 2012 APCD spun off a sister program called “Grow More Mow Less” (GMML).

GMML encourages people to replace their turfgrass with plants that don’t require mowing. To this end, GMML has been a regular presence at public events and on social media. The program has also engaged in demonstration and pilot projects, from a native plant garden, to low-mow turfgrass plots, to native grass test plots on roadsides, and vacant lots.

II. Lawn Care for Cleaner Air (LCCA)

Electric lawn equipment can make a difference. Electric equipment emits less than 1/5 of the pollution of gas-powered equipment.<sup>1</sup>

Without electric lawn equipment, Louisville would have 2.6 million more pounds of air pollution every year, including 1 million pounds of carbon monoxide, nitrous oxides, and volatile organic compounds. Eliminating this pollution helps Louisville meet the National Ambient Air Quality Standards (NAAQS) and helps us all breathe a little easier.

Includes CO, CO<sub>2</sub>, PM, NO<sub>x</sub>, SO<sub>2</sub>, and VOCs

The LCCA program offers rebates for equipment for residential applications (equipment that is powered to handle 1/3 of an acre or less) and more powerful equipment for professional and larger property applications (equipment that is powered to handle 1/3 of an acre or more). The residential side of the program remains the far more popular option, handing out the vast majority of our rebates

<sup>1</sup> These figures include carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>), a greenhouse gas of concern, though it is not a criteria pollutant defined in the Clean Air Act. Those criteria pollutants, including oxides of nitrogen (NO<sub>x</sub>), carbon monoxide (CO), volatile organic compounds (VOC) – an ozone precursor, and particulate matter (PM) are produced in much smaller quantities relative to CO<sub>2</sub>. However, these pollutants can have health effects at much lower levels. The relative proportion by which air pollution is reduced with the switch from gas to electric equipment stays roughly the same with or without CO<sub>2</sub> in the equation.

A. Residential Program

As stated above, the Residential rebate program doles out the vast majority of our rebates, but has seen steady declines in rebate numbers since 2010 (the biggest year in our history and the only year we processed over 1,000 rebates). As you can see below in Figure 1, the program has seen large drops in rebate totals over the years. This is especially noticed in the difference in rebates between 2010 and 2011 (162), 2011 and 2012 (290), and lastly between 2014 and 2015 (128). Accordingly, the total number of rebate dollars similarly declined (Figure 2). We'll discuss strategies on improving the program's performance later in the Advertising section.

B. Professional Program

During the 2012 lawn care season, LCCA Professional (then called "the Commercial program") switched from giving rebates for trading in a 2-cycle gasoline string trimmer or leaf blower and buying a 4-cycle piece of equipment to giving rebates on higher powered electric equipment when trading in a gas-powered equivalent.

We did this for two reasons: 1) new EPA regulations phased out the dirtier 2-cycle equipment, meaning we were already seeing the air pollution benefits of a 2-cycle-to-4-cycle transition without incentivizing the switch with rebates; and 2) more powerful electric equipment came on to the market.

We now offer standard rebates on any electric equipment with 100 watt-hours of running time at $30 per trimmer or leaf blower (without battery) and $50 per battery. Additionally, in order to further spur the market for commercial electric equipment, we offered to create an alternative rebate with matching funds of up to $50 per trimmer, leaf blower, and battery to all manufacturers of eligible equipment. STIHL agreed to match our offer, and we are now offering rebates of $100 on STIHL electric trimmers, leaf blowers, and AP 160 batteries.

Since the switch from the Commercial program to the Professional program we have seen a steady drop in yearly rebate totals. We processed 6 Professional rebates in 2015 after only 3 in 2014. In an attempt to improve the programs' performance, Bradley Coomes (program administrator) is revamping it with tools learned in the Louisville Metro Government sponsored Practical Application of Project Management Course.

Some of the goals for the Professional Program in 2015 include:

1. Evaluating whether to eliminate the clause that requires participants to recycle old equipment in order to receive a discount on new equipment.
2. Adding program flexibility, such as allowing participants to process their own rebates without having to go through a participating retailer.
3. Pursuing additional equipment manufacturers willing to match rebated dollars (we currently have such an arrangement with Stihl).
4. Evaluate rebate amounts in light of the more powerful and expensive products on the market.
5. Consider expanding the program to include previously ineligible products.

After the program stopped issuing rebates for 4-stroke gas-powered mowers our Professional rebate totals dropped significantly.

C. Advertising

In an attempt to increase rebate totals from 2014, we increased advertising spending in 2015 to $17,561 (we ran ads with The Courier Journal, Courier-Journal.com, Louisville Public Media, and the Louisville Eccentric Observer). This increase in spending was justified by the fact that we had not spent our entire advertising budgets the few previous years and that we had enough printed materials on hand to get through the season. The drop in rebates despite increased ad spending is puzzling considering in the past we have typically seen the opposite occur.

An increase in ad spending in 2015 did not lead to higher rebate totals.

Looking at rebate totals and rebate dollars distributed similarly is logical based on the evidence presented in Figures 1 and 2.

Looking at this in a different way you can see that our ad spending and rebate dollars distributed were practically identical in 2015. What is not clear in this graph is if rebate totals will continue to decrease no matter what we spend on advertising, rebate totals will bounce back despite a dip in advertising spending (like in 2013), or if we will have to spend even more in advertising to reach previous years' rebate totals.

We are taking all of this information into account and putting together our strategic plan for 2016. Issues that we are considering in our planning process include:

1. Whether the market for electric equipment in Jefferson County is beginning to become saturated, especially in the zip codes that we have historically targeted. This may mean that we should start targeting parts of Jefferson County that we have not in the past.
2. Perhaps we should diversify our advertising instead of sticking to the outlets we normally use.
3. Would an increased presence of printed materials in stores gain results?
4. Is our current coordinator's time adequate for maintaining the program? The coordinator is not solely devoted to the Lawn Care for Cleaner Air/Grow More Mow Less programs as previous coordinator was.
5. Factors that have caused our number of participating retailers to decrease. Those that have dropped off claim that the paperwork required to participate became more trouble than it was worth to them or that the process was simply too complicated considering their staff turnover. This theory is supported by the fact that since 2013 participating dealer rebates have been in decline while individual rebates have been on the climb (see Figure 6).

Since 2013, individual rebates have outnumbered participating retailer rebates.

III. Grow More Mow Less

The Grow More Mow Less program (GMML) is based on this simple idea: reducing the amount of turf grass that needs to be maintained, either with traditional gas-powered equipment or with cleaner, electric-powered equipment yields a pollution savings of 100 percent.

Accordingly, GMML seeks to reduce lawn-related air pollution in Louisville by encouraging landowners to switch to low-mow landscaping—trees, shrubs, groundcover, flowers ornamental grasses, edible plants, and low-mow turfgrass. These low-mow plants also have many co-benefits beyond their contributions to cleaner air, such as stormwater management, reduction of the urban heat island effect through shade and evapotranspiration, and increased habitat for wildlife such as birds and beneficial insects.

Attempts at partnerships with other agencies to expand the visibility and impact of the GMML program were made this year, but those projects did not come to fruition (for a number of reasons). It is still a goal of the program to partner with other agencies in order to implement GMML principles on public and private lands in an attempt to reduce yard equipment related pollution.

Something we are very proud of is the growth of the GMML Facebook page. In the past two years, our “likes” have grown by approximately 600%. There is more detailed information about the page below in the Social Media/Web Presence section.

IV. Public Outreach

In addition to traditional advertising, we get our message out through other means such as social media and public events.

A. Social Media/Web Presence

At this time last year our Facebook page had 1,030 like and we are now up to 1,883. For even more context, we had 114 likes at the end of 2013. Before 2014, the Facebook page was mainly used to show examples of Grow More Mow Less lawns or appropriate/native plant materials. Since then we have focused more on starting discussions on all things Grow More Mow Less related such as gardening tips, development code landscaping restrictions, Louisville's urban tree canopy assessment, and even lawn mowing robots!

With 3,699 likes, this is the most popular post in the history of the page.

B. Public Events

We attended more than double the number of events in 2015 than we did in 2014 and they include: Arbor Day at Seneca Park, Earth Day at the Louisville Zoo, the How-To Festival at the Louisville Free Public Library, a Live Lunch broadcast at Louisville Public Media, Sustainability Day at the University of Louisville, and the Kentucky Tree Climbing Championship.

IV. Looking Ahead

We are looking forward to a great year with even more public events, a more focused advertising strategy, an increased social media presence, new partnerships, and a revised LCCA Pro program. Hopefully this will all add up to more rebates, more low-mow yards, and more emissions reductions in Jefferson County. Some of our preliminary goals for LCCA and GMML in 2016 include:

A. Lawn Care for Cleaner Air

1. Strategic Advertising

We saw in 2015 that increased advertising spending no longer guarantees more rebates. A new strategy is needed and we are hard at work analyzing where our efforts were successful and where they were not. We will be working closely with our advertising partners to devise new strategies and perhaps forming new partnerships with advertising firms in an attempt to reach, until now, untapped audiences.

2. LCCA Professional

The Pro program will see some major changes in 2016 with the main goal focused on making the program easier for both participants retailers to use. Also, electric powered lawn equipment has come a long way since we first implemented the Commercial program and we will look at including new pieces of equipment and perhaps increasing rebates on more powerful (and more expensive) equipment.

B. Grow More Mow Less

1. Social Media

The popularity of the GMML Facebook page has grown exponentially since its meager beginnings and this rise in consciousness has helped the program grow in ways previously unanticipated. We will continue to use the page to disseminate information on local, regional, national, and even international efforts to curb lawn related emissions reductions.

2. Public Events

We made a conscious effort to ramp up our participation in public events in 2015 and we will be looking for even more opportunities in 2016. Attending public events is key to our overall efforts because it gives us a chance to connect with people in person, hand out our program materials, and develop potential partnerships with like-minded organizations.

3. Building New Partnerships

Partnering with other organizations is crucial to our success because of our limited manpower and resources. We will continue to seek out such partnerships in 2016 that raise the awareness of our programs.

V. Conclusion

Although 2015 saw another decrease in total rebates, we still managed to distribute 338 rebates worth $17,335.00 and keep 48,771 pounds of pollution out of the air. Not only that, but our GMMML program saw major growth and truly experienced a banner year. We are very excited about continuing to grow the GMMML program and to see how the changes to LCCA Pro will impact our program.
